The regional committees in England, Northern Ireland, Wales, Singapore and Hong Kong extend the reach of the Society by engaging with diverse audiences to promote the advancement of geographical science and its application to the challenges facing the world's people, places and environments.

The regional committees exist to:

- Promote the aims of the Society and contribute to the delivery of the Society's strategy.
- Share geographical knowledge through public events, such as talks, field visits and debates.
- Deliver a programme of events that meets the needs and interests of their local communities, including Fellows, members, students and the public.
- Provide Fellows and Members based across the regions with the opportunity to meet and create new connections furthering geography and all it stands for.
- Showcase the geography and geographers based in their region.
- Inspire the next generation of geographers.
